

Nancy Taylor

Vice President, Clinical and Educational Services

Look closely and you will only see two arms—not eight. But sometimes you wonder. Nancy Taylor is not an octopus, but she is a world-class multi-tasker. She might even represent the US in the Olympics, if multi-tasking were an event. She would have earned her place on the team. As Vice President of Clinical and Educational Services, Taylor juggles the management of five clinical programs in twelve different locations.

Four primary care clinics, a community dental clinic, three Healthcare for the Homeless Program sites, two correctional health programs and the Montana Family Medicine Residency run like clockwork at Taylor's strong, yet gentle, hand. It's no wonder. With Taylor's 20 years of executive experience in healthcare administration, a degree in Healthcare Administration, an MBA and numerous professional certifications, she is able to ensure that her patients receive the quality care they need.

Since joining RiverStone Health in 2002, Taylor has been instrumental in expanding primary-care service programs and increasing the public's access to them. "I love knowing that we are making our communities better places by creating solutions to healthcare problems," says Taylor.

Professional memberships:

- Academy of Family Medicine Administrators
- National Association of Community Health Centers
- American College of Healthcare Executives
- Montana Healthcare Association
- MHA — An Association of Montana Healthcare Organizations
- Montana Governors' Healthcare Advisory Council
- American College of Healthcare Administrators
- Montana Chapter President 1998/1999
- UWEC Student Chapter Vice President 1986; Charter Member of UWEC Student Chapter